Topic

NAVIGATING YOUR CAREER AFTER DESIGN SCHOOL

- To answer all your questions about life after college- from jobs, to further education, to switching disciplines and fields of work.
- Our speakers will discuss their time in college, the journey after, and how design education has affected all parts of their professional careers.

Tell us something about yourself?

I am a fashion designer from Navi Mumbai; currently working as a management consultant with Boston Consulting Group (BCG) after graduating with an MBA from the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (IIMA). Two things I absolutely love - travel and dogs.

What are you currently doing?

I'm currently working as a management consultant with Boston Consulting Group (BCG) after graduating with an MBA from the Indian Institute of Management, Ahmedabad (IIMA).

What are some of the best memories you have from your college days?

My best memories are with my group from college (we're 11 friends) - even today, some of the best memories I create as I grow up, are with them. Hanging out in the amphitheater after class in the evening, drinking cold coffee, the canteen's schezwan cheese dosa, listening to my favorite music while working late hours in the stitching lab, and organizing DZMA 2015 are some specifics among the best memories I've created in those 4 years.

What would you like to say to the students at SID?

My eventual goal is to get back to design- it's a concept whose value is only increasing in the industry. Even if you do branch out and do something entirely different, always remember that design will aid you in some way or the other. While it is not the answer to every career option, it is definitely a valuable element in the process of getting in- simply because you're a brilliant designer (this college brings that out of you) and that will always make people respect and cherish your skillset, irrespective of the industry they may hail from.
